

Jack Cashill will talk about how our media lost their way

Jack Cashill is an independent writer and producer and, on a contractual basis, the Executive Editor of Ingram's Magazine. In addition to his work with Ingram's, Jack has written for Fortune, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The Weekly Standard, American-Thinker.com, and regularly for WorldNetDaily. He was born and raised in Newark, New Jersey and received his Ph.D. in American Studies from Purdue University in 1982. He has taught media and literature at Purdue and at universities in the Kansas City area. He served as a Fulbright professor in Nancy, France. He will address how a generation ago journalists prided themselves on their objectivity and lack of partisanship. Now, from the New York Times to Google News, they are expected to honor a party line. This means ignoring some stories and hounding others, even if they go nowhere. Jack will talk about a pair of recent projects in which he has been involved that show how far the media have gone astray.

President's Message

As we approach the end of this year, our focus will be on election for the six leadership positions called for in our By-Laws, developing a budget for 2020, adding new members and renewing existing members and soliciting funds for our scholarship program. An officer slate will be developed and voted on by those attending our November meeting. You can nominate yourself or someone else to be considered by emailing me at mad-grm8127@gmail.com. Without members willing and able to serve in leadership positions, no organization can thrive much less survive over the long run. Our budget is almost totally dependent on your membership dues which covers only 70% of our annual needs. The other 30% is increasingly coming out of our reserves which consist of three CDs each worth approximately $6500. While our finances remain healthy for now, we are trending in the wrong direction and at some point will have to increase dues to offset this deficit. Letters for membership renewal and for scholarship donations will be mailed out by the end of this year. Please respond as expeditiously as possible so we can plan our 2020 activities. We hope you will be able to attend our remaining meetings this year. We have some excellent speakers lined up. We also hope to see you at our Holiday Party. Our Auxiliary does an outstanding job every year making this event a great way to get in the mood for the Holiday season. As always, please remember in your thoughts and prayers members who are experiencing serious illness and the families and friends of those who have passed.

Auxiliary News

September Time

Fall is in the air with summer still holding on. I want to thank Rory Magliano for being the hostess in August. We loved the candles and the candy you gave us. The candles smelled so good. This month I will be asking one of the ladies to head the committee to find officers for next year. We are in need for a president as I will be stepping down. Plan to join us at 11:30, September 28 2019 for our meeting. We would love to have you join us. Hope to see you then.
